and the aspirations will regenerate themselves because resurrection is always tomorrow. They will be back. And, maybe next year it could be done. Maybe next year the tax reform that we so desperately need can be done. And, maybe next year genuine property tax relief can be done. But, be honest. It is not to be done this year.

SPEAKER NICHOL: Senator Newell.

SENATOR NEWELL: Mr. President, members of the Legislature, I appreciate Senator Johnson's remarks. I appreciate Senator Hoagland's anxiety to move on to a very lengthy schedule. I am wondering, however, if we as a Legislature ought not give just a little more time and attention to this issue. One of the questions that I have been asking for some time with the Legislature's veto overrides of nearly everything that the Governor sent back in the operations bills was whether or not we could survive and fund this government and some of the A bills that are out there with a 19 percent income tax. Apparently Senator Johnson believes that is what ought to happen. I assume Senator Hoagland feels the same thing. I am not sure whether that is, in fact, a possibility at this late hour. There are some bills that are particularly popular that are on Final Reading and some more that will be sent across to Final Reading with A bills. I think we can think of them and we can name them. We have a number of proposals out there. If you look on your green sheet, you will look at those A bills. Now the question is, can they be funded? And the answer is probably not. The Governor will have to veto and this Legislature, if it keeps to what it has done in the last week, will probably override and override. So we will send to the Governor a tax rate bill that will hold the taxes at 19, not hold them, reduce the income tax from 20 to 19 and reduce the sales tax from 4 percent to 3 1/2 cents. And if we override, as I fear we might, we will not fund...we will not be able to fund adequately our budget. Now I have a little more investment maybe in the Legislature setting sales and income taxes than others do. I would hope that the whole process would work a little differently than it seems to be working now. I had hoped that we would be responsible in our veto overrides. I had hoped that we would be
